A STORY OF GO LI-CHING.

(Written for The Star,)

The Chinase Just very many legends, some of them my prefty, and some of them are queer, Perturps one of the queerest is that concerning Characteristic's Comm Remedy. It has On Li-Ching—the Invisible Fox.

On Li-Ching is a spirit that is not to be triffed with for his dearguetive powers are so extensive that one should endeavor to avoid

Some idea of his mightiness may be gained from the fact that he can burn one's house down, decree the day of one's death, or bring about any form of misery according to the way the fancy moves him.

What makes him all the more terrible is his invisibility. All his havor can be wrought, and he can never be captured. He is a spirit, If it is his wish that one's house should be destroyed by fire, he simply alights on a certain spot, and immediately there bursts forth a flame. Fortunately, his power is not so great that the flames cannot be subdued if they are discovered in time-His most terrible visitation is condemnation to death. The subject, perhaps, is sleeping. On Li-Ching suddenly springs from nowhere, dights on the chosen victim, touches his or her face with his invisible tongue, and, at the same moment, decrees that death shall take place, the sum of TWENTY-TYE HUNperhaps a month, a week, a day, or one second hence—the time is all DRED DOLLARS ($2,500.00), he and matter of a whim. His mission ended, Oo Li-Ching springs whence is hereby appropriated from the Genhe came -nowhere -and the death sentence is carried out. measures to prevent its fulfilment. But like most things, even these visits of Oo Li-Ching can be gan inmed to advantage -anyway in the case of a fire. The least observant person who takes up his residence in the treaty ports of China, 1910. sympaths or freedom or wisdom, to where fire insurance is known, will soon be struck with the numerous fires that occur among the native dwellings, especially just before 1910. Chinese New Year, which may very well be described as Settling determine for these millions when Days. This is where Oo Li-Ching can be turned to account. Oo Litheir money is devoted to a beneficial Ching seemed to be working overtime in Shanghai about two years ago, and the insurance companies had a lot of claims made upon them. 23, 24, 26. The foreigners, however, are disposed to think that Oo Li-Ching's powarandiose nian, which is enough to ers are somewhat over-rated, or that he is not so had as he is painted. Accordingly, many insurance claims were contested, with satisfactory by hir Rossavala himself in the same results—to the insurance companies at any rate. In addition to this, the police authorities pitted one of their inspectors against the fire ATLAS ASSURANCE COMPANY OF field. The latter would seem to have got a good scare-up when the mundane one got busy, for fires became less numerous. On Li-Ching's NTW name was fading away from memory, and it was hoped that he had gone out of business in the fire department, anyway when recently providence washington in he turned up in a very determined way.

According to the story of the Chinese whose house was visited, On Li-Ching hopped into an empty busket one day. The basket burst into flators, but, fortunately, the owner of the basket was at hand and A. C. McKeever, minister, Bible was able to save his property. The next day Oo Li-Ching repeated his Behool, Wm. G. Hall, superintendent, performance, and luckily the owner was once more at hand.
